Murphy up 6 in Connecticut Senate race

Raleigh, N.C.-- PPP's newest poll of the Connecticut Senate race finds Democrat Chris Murphy expanding his lead to 6 points over Republican foe Linda McMahon, 48-42. Last month he led 48-44.

There's no doubt Murphy's image has taken a hit over the course of this campaign. Only $36 \%$ of voters say they have a favorable opinion of him to $44 \%$ with a negative one. That's down a net 15 points from July when he was at a 38/31 favorability spread. But voters aren't warming up to McMahon either- she has a $42 \%$ favorability rating with $49 \%$ of voters seeing her unfavorably, numbers basically identical to 42/48 a couple months ago. McMahon's done a good job of hitting Murphy but she hasn't done anything to prop herself up and in a race between an unpopular Democratic candidate and an unpopular Republican candidate in a state like Connecticut the Democrat is going to win.

The key question we asked on this poll was probably whether people wanted Democrats or Republicans in control of the Senate, and by a 50/38 margin folks say they want the Democrats in charge. That reality should help Murphy along as well.

McMahon actually leads the race with independents, 51-38. Her problem is that $20 \%$ of Republicans are supporting Murphy over her, similar to what we found her losing to Richard Blumenthal in 2010. You simply can't win as a Republican in Connecticut without holding your party base in line to a greater extent than that, but many GOP voters continue to find her unacceptable.

There's a huge gender gap on the race with Murphy leading 54-35 with women, while McMahon has a 49-41 advantage with men. If there was any thought that McMahon might be able to over perform with women that seems not to be the case.
"Chris Murphy again looks like the clear favorite in the Connecticut Senate race," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "The race might be closer than expected, but he's still more than likely to emerge as the winner."

PPP surveyed 801 likely Connecticut voters from September $24^{\text {th }}$ to 26th. The margin of error for the survey is $+/-3.5 \%$. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization.
