Democrats set to win Massachusetts, Connecticut Senate races

Raleigh, N.C. - PPP's final polls in Massachusetts and Connecticut find that Democrats are likely to pick up the Senate seat in the former and hold onto the open seat in the latter. Elizabeth Warren leads Scott Brown 52-46 in the Massachusetts contest, while Chris Murphy has a 52-43 advantage over Linda McMahon in Connecticut.

Scott Brown has a 52/36 approval rating. Usually Senators with those kinds of approval numbers are safe for reelection. But Warren needed to do 2 things in this campaign: solidify the Democratic vote behind her and reduce Brown's advantage with independents. She's succeeded on both of those fronts. $84 \%$ of Democrats are planning to vote for her, only slightly less than the $88 \%$ of Republicans Brown's winning. And Warren's deficit with independents is only 21 points at 59-38. Our final poll of the 2010 Massachusetts Senate special election found Brown defeating Martha Coakley 64-32 with them so Warren's really made up a fair amount of ground on that front.

In Connecticut our final poll finds Chris Murphy with his largest lead all year at 9 points. He's increased his advantage by 5 points since two weeks ago when he was ahead just 4844. Linda McMahon, already unpopular, has just become more disliked by voters in the state over the last couple weeks. Only $37 \%$ have a favorable opinion of her to $52 \%$ with an unfavorable one.
"In August polling found the Democratic candidates trailing in both of these New England Senate races," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "But Elizabeth Warren and Chris Murphy have closed strongly and appear to be in a safe position for victory, which will go a long way toward helping their party keep its majority."

Barack Obama leads the Presidential race comfortably in both of these states, 57/42 in Massachusetts and 55/42 in Connecticut. But both of those leads are down considerably from his margin of victory in 2008- he's dropped 11 points from his 26 point win in Massachusetts and 10 points from his 23 point win in Connecticut.

PPP surveyed 1,089 likely voters in Massachusetts and 1,220 in Connecticut on November $1^{\text {st }}$ and 2nd. The margin of error for MA is $+/-3.0 \%$ and for CT it's $+/-2.8 \%$. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
