Obama, King, gay marriage favored in Maine

Raleigh, N.C. – PPP's final Maine poll of the 2012 election cycle finds Barack Obama leading the state 55-42. Romney has gained 3 points since PPP's last look at the state in mid-September, but he hasn't been able to get too close because Obama's support has remained steady at 55%.

Obama has a 50% approval rating in the state with 44% of voters disapproving of him. You might expect the contest in Maine to be closer based on those numbers, but Mitt Romney is not getting any New England home field advantage- only 40% of voters have a favorable opinion of him to 53% with a negative one.

If there is any intrigue with the Presidential race in Maine it's that the race is relatively close in the 2nd Congressional District. Obama leads Romney only 51/46 there with most of his statewide margin coming thanks to a 59/39 lead in the 1st District. It's a long shot for Romney but his chances of picking up that electoral vote are better than his prospects in places that have received more attention this week such as Michigan and Minnesota.

It looks like Angus King will be the next Senator from Maine. He's at 50% to 36% for Charlie Summers and 12% for Cynthia Dill. King has solidified his position since our last poll in September when he led Summers just 43-35. King's increased his share of the Democratic vote from 58% to 68% since that survey, he's ahead of Summers 57/31 with independents, and he's winning over 21% of the Republican vote.

Maine's referendum to legalize gay marriage is leading for passage by a 52/45 margin, numbers virtually unchanged from 52/44 in our last survey. What we've found historically with these gay marriage ballot measures though is that undecided voters tend to end up voting anti-gay so if I had to guess this is something more like a 52/48 advantage and at that point it can go either way- this is likely to be a pretty close vote.

“Barack Obama and Angus King look like pretty sure bets in Maine,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “The big question is whether it will become the first state in the country to legalize gay marriage at the ballot box.”

PPP surveyed 1,633 likely voters on November 1st and 2nd. The margin of error for the survey is +/-2.4%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
