Nixon leads Kinder by 19, Randles by 21 for MO-Gov.

Raleigh, N.C. - Too bad for Republicans that former Senator John Danforth decided against a gubernatorial bid in Missouri next year-because he is the only one revered enough to even come close to beating the popular, moderate incumbent Jay Nixon.

According to PPP’s latest poll of the race, Danforth would have actually led Nixon by six points, 45-39. But against four others, Nixon leads by nine to 21 points. The most likely nominee until recent scandals arose, Lt. Gov. Peter Kinder trails, 50-31, a decline of five points on the margin for Kinder since PPP last polled the state in May. Nixon won his current term by a similar spread. Two other potential candidates-Nixon's predecessor Matt Blunt and former Senator and 2000 gubernatorial nominee Jim Talent-would trail by respective 50-37 and 47-38 margins. The only candidate other than Kinder actually in the race, unknown attorney Bill Randles, trails 45-24.
$51 \%$ approve and only $30 \%$ disapprove of the work Nixon has been doing, up a tad from the 48-29 measured four months ago. He is now the $10^{\text {th }}$ most popular of the 42 governors on which PPP has polled. Nixon is not terribly popular with his own party (58-21), but he has huge crossover support, almost breaking even with Republicans (4042). Independents here are more numerous than in many states, at $30 \%$ of the electorate, and they like him better than Democrats do, falling 57-26 in his favor.

Though most of those Republicans fall back in line when it comes time to vote, Nixon still manages $13-16 \%$ of their support, even against Danforth. And other than Danforth, the Republicans earn only 5-7\% of Democrats. Nixon also leads by 13 to 26 points with independents except against Danforth, with Kinder the worst off.
"Republicans can stick with Peter Kinder," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "But at this point he would do just as bad as Kenny Hulshof did in 2008. They’d probably need a different face to really give Jay Nixon a run for his money."

PPP surveyed 632 Missouri voters from September $9^{\text {th }}$ to $12^{\text {th }}$. The margin of error for the survey is $+/-3.9 \%$. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
