Obama cleaning up in New Mexico

Raleigh, N.C. - Until 2008, New Mexico was one of the closest swing states in the country. Al Gore won New Mexico by hundredths of a point in 2000, and George W. Bush won it by less than one point in 2004. President Obama changed all that; he trounced John McCain by 15 points in 2008, and in PPP's latest poll of the state, it looks like he is set to do that again.

When PPP last polled the state six months ago, Obama led Mitt Romney by the same 4942 margin by which Bill Clinton defeated Bob Dole in 1996. In the intervening months, that lead has jumped to the same 15 points by which Obama beat McCain last time (5338). Neighboring Texas’ Ron Paul actual comes closer by two points (51-38); nominal frontrunner Newt Gingrich lags by 17 (56-39); Michele Bachmann by 20 (56-36); and Rick Perry by 21 (56-35). As in most states lately, Paul is the only candidate to beat the president with independents (by eight points), while the others trail by four to 13.

PPP also took a look at the state’s former governor Gary Johnson, who may soon leave the GOP field for the Libertarian Party nomination. 45\% see him favorably and 39\% unfavorably - not overwhelming numbers, but golden compared to the other Republicans, whose favorability ratings range from $21 \%$ to $28 \%$, and unfavorability figures from $54 \%$ to $67 \%$. Johnson is the only candidate more popular than the president, who has a 49-46 approval spread in the state, down just slightly from 50-44 in June. As a third-party candidate, Johnson would draw 26-30\% of the Republican votes, 12-16\% of Democrats, and actually win independents with $31-33 \%$. He would help the president to a 17-point win over either Gingrich or Romney, and at $20-23 \%$ of the overall vote, would nearly equal Romney's 27\% and Gingrich’s 28\%.
"Barack Obama’s popularity is way down in New Mexico but voters don't see any of the Republican candidates as serious alternatives," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "It should stay in the Democratic column in 2012."

PPP surveyed 500 New Mexico voters from December $10^{\text {th }}$ to $12^{\text {th }}$. The margin of error for the survey is $+/-4.4 \%$. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
