Quinn's numbers up but still in perilous shape

Raleigh, N.C. – Three years ago, Pat Quinn surprised some by beating Bill Brady for a full term as governor by less than a point in a terrible turnout environment for Democrats and following the impeachment of his predecessor, Rod Blagojevich. To boot, Quinn had a 32-54 approval rating of his own. His numbers since then have only gone down. In PPP's latest poll, he has a 34-60 approval spread.

In the short term, however, Quinn's numbers are trending slightly upward. A year ago, PPP measured him at 25-64, making him then the least popular governor in the country. His 13-point marginal improvement has coincided with an improving re-election picture. He trailed Dan Rutherford by four points and Kirk Dillard by seven in the previous poll, but he now ties Dillard at 39%, and trails Rutherford by two points, 39-41. Quinn also ties Brady at 41% and leads Bruce Rauner by three (41-38). Still, 39-41% of the vote is not a strong position in which to start.

Unlike Quinn, Dick Durbin's 46-40 approval spread is down 11 points on the margin from the 51-34 PPP measured a year ago. But he is in good company. President Obama's own approval numbers in his home state are only 50-46, still one of his ten best states. But that is down a net 12 points from last November (57-41). The similar decline for Durbin and Obama is likely a result of the current national mood which has sent a lot of Democrats' and Republicans' numbers sharply downward in recent months.

Despite this trend, Durbin remains in fine shape. He has 51-52% of the vote, and leads three potential Republican challengers by 15 to 18 points. Perennial candidate Jim Oberweis is the best-known (52% name recognition versus 15-16% for the other two), and therefore does the best, trailing 51-36. Last November, Durbin led a generic GOP candidate by a similar 52-38 margin, so this probably represents roughly Republicans' ceiling unless the political environment gets even more toxic for Democrats nationally.

“The Illinois Governor's race appears to be a toss up,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “That's bad for Democrats given the blue leaning nature of the state, but it could be a lot worse given where Quinn's approval numbers are.”

PPP surveyed 557 Illinois voters, including an oversample of 375 usual Republican primary voters, from November 22nd to 25th. The margin of error for the overall survey is +/- 4.2% and +/- 5.1% for the GOP sample. PPP's surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
