Hagan holds steady lead in North Carolina Senate race

Raleigh, N.C. - PPP's newest North Carolina poll finds a steady race, with Kay Hagan leading at $46 \%$ to $43 \%$ for Thom Tillis and $5 \%$ for Sean Haugh. This is the third month in a row that Hagan has held an advantage of either 3 or 4 points. In a two candidate race Hagan still leads Tillis 47/44, indicating that Haugh's potential 'spoiler effect' on the race is waning. Haugh's supporters only say their second choice would be Tillis by a 34/30 spread now, considerably closer than the difference was earlier in the campaign.

Both candidates remain unpopular in the closing stretch of the contest, but Hagan at least fares a little bit better with voters than Haugh does. $41 \%$ of voters approve of the job she's doing to $50 \%$ who disapprove, for a -9 net approval rating. That's not good but it puts her ahead of Tillis who just $37 \%$ of voters see favorably to $49 \%$ who have a negative opinion, for a -12 net favorability rating.

There's nothing very surprising about where the candidates' support is coming from. Hagan is up $49 / 37$ with women, $85 / 4$ with African Americans, and $61 / 27$ with young voters. Meanwhile Tillis is up 49/42 with men, 55/34 with white voters, and 54/37 with seniors. Tillis is ahead $43 / 38$ with independents but in an unusual finding for North Carolina politics, Hagan is getting the same share of the Democratic vote (81\%) that Tillis getting of the Republican vote and if you do that as a Democrat in North Carolina you're generally going to win given the party's voter registration advantage in the state.
"The North Carolina Senate race has always been close," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "But Kay Hagan’s lead has been persistent for six months now."

Voters in the state remain very closely divided in their feelings about state politics. 40\% approve of the job Pat McCrory is doing to $43 \%$ who disapprove. The General Assembly continues to be very unpopular with a $25 \%$ approval rating to $52 \%$ of voters who disapprove of it, but despite Republican control voter anger with it doesn't seem to know party bounds. The Democrats have a 38/48 favorability rating, with the Republicans at $40 / 45$. The generic legislative ballot is still very tight, with $46 \%$ of voters saying they would choose a Republican candidate and $44 \%$ a Democrat if the election was today.

PPP surveyed 780 likely voters from October $16^{\text {th }}$ to 18 th. The margin of error for the survey is +/- $3.5 \% .80 \%$ of interviews for the poll were conducted over the phone with $20 \%$ interviewed over the internet to reach respondents who don't have landline telephones.
