Trump Up Big in Missouri; GOP Hopefuls Lead Clinton in State

Raleigh, N.C. - PPP's new Missouri poll provides more evidence that Donald Trump emerged from the first debate at least momentarily unscathed. He leads the Republican field in the state with $23 \%$ to $11 \%$ each for Jeb Bush and Ben Carson, $10 \%$ for Mike Huckabee, $9 \%$ for Ted Cruz, 8\% for Scott Walker, 7\% for Carly Fiorina, 6\% for Marco Rubio, and 4\% each for John Kasich and Rand Paul. That makes for a very clean top ten in Missouri because everyone else is at $1 \%$ or less- Chris Christie, Bobby Jindal, Rick Perry, and Rick Santorum all get 1\%, George Pataki is at less than 1\%, and Jim Gilmore and Lindsey Graham have literally no supporters.

What really stands out in the numbers is how broad Trump's support is- he leads with moderates (25\%), 'somewhat liberal' voters (23\%), and 'very conservative' voters (20\%) alike. He is a lot stronger with men (30\%) but he leads with women too at $16 \%$. He's particularly strong with young voters (32\%) but also leads with middle aged voters (21\%) and seniors (17\%). Every group we track he has the lead with on this poll.

Our findings in Missouri also reinforce some of what we found in Iowa over the weekend:
-Carly Fiorina is on the rise. Her 7\% showing moves her up to 7th place in the GOP standings, and she has a solid 50/18 favorability rating.
-Rand Paul is really falling apart. His favorability is under water with Missouri Republicans at $36 / 44$, and only $4 \%$ support him for the nomination. It used to be that Chris Christie was the only major candidate we found with negative favorability numbers within the primary electorate, but Paul's joined him on that list.
-There might not be anyone worse off than Christie though. He has a 28/51 favorability rating and now polls at just $1 \%$ for the nomination, the same thing we found for him in Iowa.
-With a 71/20 favorability rating Mike Huckabee is by far the most broadly liked of the Republican candidates in Missouri. But it still doesn't translate to much support for the nomination. His opportunity may have passed in 2012. Also near the top of the favorability heap are Marco Rubio (60/18), Ben Carson (57/14), and Ted Cruz (57/19).

On the Democratic side Hillary Clinton leads with 53\% to 25\% for Bernie Sanders, 5\% each for Martin O'Malley and Jim Webb, and 1\% for Lincoln Chafee.

Clinton has dominant leads in the state with 'very liberal' voters (72/21), 'somewhat liberal' ones (57/31), women (57/19), African Americans (64/11), white voters (52/28), and seniors (63/12). Sanders also trails but at least keeps Clinton under $50 \%$ with moderates (45/22), men (48/32), and younger voters (47/28). Clinton doing better with 'very liberal' voters than moderates is a departure from most states but is likely a function of non-Democratic voters being able to vote in the Democratic primary in Missouri since it's an open primary state and not being favorable toward her.

In 2008 the Presidential race was basically a tie in Missouri but Mitt Romney won the state easily in 2012 and it doesn't look like there's a ton of hope for a Democratic victory there next year either. Clinton trails all of the Republicans in the state by margins ranging from 7 to 15 points. Marco Rubio fares the best, leading her by 15 points at 51/36. Ben Carson leads her by 14 at 52/38, and John Kasich (49/36), Scott Walker (50/37) and Mike Huckabee (51/38) each lead her by 13 points.

The GOP hopefuls Clinton comes closest to are Jeb Bush who she trails by 7 at 47/40, and Donald Trump and Chris Christie who she has 9 point deficits against at 48/39 and 46/37 respectively. In between are Carly Fiorina who leads Clinton by 10 at 47/37, and Rand Paul (49/37) and Ted Cruz (50/38) who each lead Clinton by 12 points.

We found on our Iowa poll that Clinton and Bernie Sanders weren't faring that different from each other in general election match ups against the Republicans and that trend presents itself in Missouri as well. Sanders does worse than Clinton against Bush, trailing 47/34. But his 15 point deficit against Rubio (48/33) is the same as Clinton's, his 9 point deficit against Trump (48/39) is the same as Clinton's, and he actually does a tick better than Clinton against Walker trailing by 12 points compared to her 13 at 46/34. On average Sanders only does a point worse than Clinton in the comparable match ups.

Missouri does present more evidence of the threat a Donald Trump independent bid could pose to the Republican Party though. He actually beats out Jeb Bush as a third party candidate, getting $30 \%$ to $29 \%$ for Bush with Clinton leading the way at $34 \%$. Trump leads with independents at $37 \%$, and gets $39 \%$ of Republicans and $15 \%$ of Democrats as well.
"Donald Trump's lead in Missouri is the largest we've found for him anywhere we've polled to date," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "There’s no indication in our polling yet that all of the controversy over the weekend hurt him at all."

Public Policy Polling surveyed 859 voters from August $7^{\text {th }}$ to $9^{\text {th }}$, including 440 Republican primary voters and 352 Democratic primary voters. The margin of error for the overall survey is $+/-3.3 \%$, for the Republican primary voters it’s $+/-4.7 \%$, and for the Democratic primary voters it's $+/-5.2 \%$. $80 \%$ of participants responded via the phone, while $20 \%$ of respondents who did not have landlines conducted the survey over the internet.
