Obama leads by 4 in Nevada, Senate race tied

Raleigh, N.C. – PPP's newest Nevada poll finds Barack Obama leading Mitt Romney 51/47, numbers exactly identical to what they were when we last polled the state two weeks ago. Obama is already well on his way to winning Nevada based on early votes that have been cast in the week. Among those who say they've already voted he has a 61/39 advantage. Romney is up 51/46 with those planning to vote between now and election day.

The debates over the last couple weeks seem to have improved Obama's image in Nevada. 52% of voters approve of him now to 46% who disapprove, up from a 49/48 spread on our last poll. Nevadans think Obama won Monday's debate by a 50/38 margin.

Obama's leading based on advantages of 69/28 with Hispanics, 82/12 with African Americans, 54/44 with women, and 58/39 with young voters. Romney's ahead with men (50/48), whites (57/42), and seniors (53/45). He also has a 53/44 advantage with independents but he'd probably need to take them by a wider margin than that to overcome the Democratic registration edge in the state.

The Nevada Senate race looks like a toss up with Dean Heller and Shelley Berkley both at 44% and Independent American Party candidate David Lory VanderBeek getting 7%. The tie is a shift in Berkley's direction from a three point deficit on our poll 2 weeks ago.

A lot of attention has been paid to Berkley's unpopularity and there's really no doubt that Nevadans are not enamored with her- only 41% have a favorable opinion to 53% with a negative one. What's received less attention and is a big reason why this race is competitive is that Heller isn't exactly popular either. He has a slightly negative approval rating with 46% of voters giving him good marks to 47% who disapprove.

“Barack Obama’s had a persistent lead in our Nevada polling this year even if he’s not likely to match his margin of victory from 2008,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “The Senate race looks like a toss up and is likely be decided by Obama voters who have their doubts about both of the candidates.”

PPP surveyed 636 likely voters from October 22nd to 24th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-3.9%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
