Dewhurst leads Cruz by 17 in Texas Senate Race

Raleigh, N.C. – David Dewhurst leads Ted Cruz 46-29 in the Texas Republican Senate primary and the main question on Tuesday will be whether he can sneak over 50% and avoid a runoff. Tom Leppert's in third at 15% with Craig James at 3% and 2% of voters preferring someone else. 5% remain undecided and if Dewhurst can pick up enough of those folks it might get him over the finish line.

Dewhurst's 17 point lead represents a reversal of the direction the race had been heading in. Dewhurst started out with a 29 point lead in our polling last September but by January that had declined to 18 points and on our last poll, a month ago, it was down to 12. But Cruz has only gained 3 points over the last four weeks, while Dewhurst has seen an 8 point bump in his support.

Even if Dewhurst does get stopped short of 50%, his prospects in a runoff election look pretty promising. He would lead Cruz 59-34 in a head to head, mostly because Leppert voters prefer Dewhurst over Cruz by a 77-13 margin.

Dewhurst's prospects look good whether his victory comes on Tuesday or later. But there is one finding in the poll that suggests some possibility for things to be closer than expected. 49% of Cruz's voters are 'very excited' about casting their ballots on Tuesday, while only 27% of Dewhurst's are.

With voters who are 'very excited' about turning out, Cruz actually has a 42-37 advantage. That pro-Cruz enthusiasm gap won't be enough to put him in first place on Tuesday but if he does force a runoff it could give him a fighting chance in a low turnout election further down the line.

“David Dewhurst has shored up his standing as the Republican front runner over the last month,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “He’s at about even odds to win without a runoff and even if he doesn’t get to 50% on Tuesday he’ll be a very strong favorite in a head to head with Ted Cruz.”

PPP surveyed 482 likely Republican primary voters on May 22nd and 23rd. The margin of error for the survey is +/-4.5%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
