Senate race knotted up

Raleigh, N.C. – The Colorado Senate race looks like a toss up, with incumbent Democrat Michael Bennet and Republican challenger Jane Norton knotted at 43.

Neither of the leading candidates is particularly popular. Bennet's approval rating is 32%, with 46% of voters disapproving of him. Norton's not a whole lot better with 35% of respondents having an unfavorable opinion of her to only 25% who view her positively. Both candidates are in the red with independent voters.

Norton leads Bennet 44-35 with independents, but Bennet is getting 79% of the Democratic vote while Norton is currently at just 77% of the Republican vote, leading to the overall tie.

Bennet primary challenger Andrew Romanoff actually leads Norton by a 44-39 margin, as he loses only 6% of the Democratic vote (compared to Bennet's 11%) and holds Norton to a 4 point advantage with independents.

Both Democrats easily defeat the other two top Republican candidates. Bennet leads Ken Buck 46-40 and Tom Wiens 45-37 while Romanoff has 44-36 and 45-34 advantages respectively over those two.

Romanoff, Buck, and Wiens are all relatively unknown. 45% voters have no opinion of Romanoff, 68% are ambivalent toward Buck, and 72% are unaware of Wiens.

“Republicans really haven't been helped by getting Jane Norton in the race,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “Michael Bennet's actually polling a little better against her than he was against Bob Beauprez last summer. This is likely to be one of the closest races in the country this fall.”

PPP surveyed 580 Colorado voters from March 5th to 8th. The survey's margin of error is +/-4.1%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.
