GA Republicans split on secession, Deal vulnerable

Raleigh, N.C. – Following on Tuesday’s release which showed that 18% of voters nationally, including a quarter of Republicans, support their state seceding as a consequence of President Obama’s re-election, an even higher 26% of Georgians are in favor of that idea. That includes 42% of the state’s Republicans—the same proportion who are opposed.

Nathan Deal won the Georgia gubernatorial election easily over a former governor in 2010, a wave year for Republicans. But he may find it tougher to hold onto his seat in two years. Only 37% of Georgians approve of his job performance, and 40% disapprove. He starts out with leads against three potential opponents, but all three are much less known to voters than the incumbent is.

Deal leads Rep. John Barrow by four points (44-40), Atlanta Mayor Kasim Reed by seven (47-40), and State Sen. Jason Carter by eight (46-38). But only 35% to 63% of voters have an opinion about the Democrats on a personal level.

“Saxby Chambliss has received most of the attention as Georgia looks toward the 2014 election,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “But in terms of who would be more vulnerable to a Democratic challenger, it may be Nathan Deal.”

Though public opinion on gay marriage is generally moving more in favor across the country, even in the most conservative states, Georgia is still clearly not at the point at which it can accept same-sex rites being legal. 65% oppose it, including a 44% plurality of Democrats.

As everywhere, Peach State voters are much more open to the form of legal equality offered by civil unions, however. 57% support at least that measure, including two-thirds of Democrats, 64% of independents, and even 44% of Republicans.

Georgians are even more opposed—70%—to a new stadium for the Atlanta Falcons. 75% oppose public funding for one.

PPP surveyed 729 Georgia voters from November 30th to December 2nd. The margin of error for the survey is +/-3.6%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
