Georgia Senate race could be competitive

Raleigh, N.C. – PPP's new Georgia poll finds that with a pretty anonymous set of potential Republican candidates, Democrats might have a real shot at making the Senate race competitive next year.

PPP looked at match ups involving 5 Republicans (Paul Broun, Phil Gingrey, Karen Handel, Jack Kingston and Tom Price) and 3 Democrats (John Barrow, Jason Carter, and Max Cleland). Cleland is the only person in the whole bunch who has more than 50% statewide name recognition, with 48% of voters rating him favorably to 29% with an unfavorable view.

If Cleland could be coaxed into the race he would start out with a lead over every Republican we tested him against. He's up 1 against Price, 3 against Kingston, 5 against Gingrey, and 7 against Broun and Handel. Democratic prospects for winning the seat might not hinge on what could be an unlikely Cleland candidacy though. John Barrow trails by an average of only 4/10ths of a point against the Republicans we tested- leading Gingrey and Handel by 1, tying Broun, trailing Price by 1, and trailing Kingston by 3. Carter trails the quintet of Republicans we tested by an average of 3.8 points- he's down 2 to Broun and Gingrey, 4 to Handel, 5 to Price, and 6 to Kingston.

“Obviously it’s been a long time since Democrats won a major election in Georgia,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “But if they nominate a strong candidate next year and the Republicans nominate someone to the far right, this could be one of their few pick up opportunities in a year where the Senate map sets up well for the GOP.”

It's hard to say much about the Republican contest for Senate right now other than that it's a complete tossup. We tested 7 potential candidates and 6 of them all clustered between 10 and 15% in our polling- Handel and Kingston get 15%, Casey Cagle comes in at 13%, Gingrey gets 12%, Broun 11%, Price 10%, and Tom Graves 3%. The plurality goes to undecided at 20%.

PPP surveyed 602 Georgia voters and 366 usual Republican primary voters from February 15th to 18th. The margin of error for the overall sample is +/-4.0% and +/-5.1% for the GOP portion. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization.
