Hermentum continues: Cain leads Ohio and Hawaii primaries

Raleigh, N.C. – The Republican presidential race is very much nationalized right now, with very few regional or state-by-state differences. Rick Perry is really cratering everywhere, and Herman Cain has led comfortably in every PPP primary poll in the last two weeks, first in rural, right-leaning states like North Carolina, West Virginia, and Nebraska, then Iowa and nationally, and now joined by states as distant and different as Ohio and Hawaii. Mitt Romney's one true stronghold remains New England. Newt Gingrich is also on the rise, though not to the extent that Cain is.

Perry has never been as low as he is in Ohio, where he has fallen to sixth at 5%, not far above perennial cellar-dwellers Jon Huntsman and Rick Santorum (1% each) and Gary Johnson (essentially zero). Cain has 34% to Romney's 19%, Gingrich's 14%, Ron Paul's 7%, and Michele Bachmann's 6%. This is a drastic change from when PPP last took a look at the contest in August—then, taken the same weekend as his official announcement, Perry led with 21% to Romney's 20%, Bachmann's 14%, Cain's 10%, and Gingrich's and Paul's 8%. Perry is down 16 points and Bachmann eight, with Cain up 24 and Gingrich six. Romney remains near the top, but cannot get over the hump yet because the most conservative voters, who are usually 35-45% of the electorate, strongly dislike him and are waffling from one right-wing candidate to another instead of settling on Romney.

In Hawaii, Cain has a 36-24 lead over Romney, with Perry and Gingrich at 8%, Bachmann at 6%, Paul at 4%, and the other three each at 1%. This is one of the more diverse Republican electorates in the country; 44% are something other than white.

That at least two-thirds of these voters say they may change their mind makes the race's volatility understandable—and gives Romney, Perry, and really anyone else hope that they can quickly make up ground in the months ahead.

PPP surveyed 500 usual Ohio Republican primary voters and 293 Hawaii GOP primary voters from October 13th to 16th. The margin of error for the Ohio survey is +/-4.4%, and +/-5.7% for the Hawaii survey. These polls were not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
