Iowans don't want Culver back; Harkin leads early '14 tests

Raleigh, N.C. —43% of Iowans approve of Terry Branstad's job performance, and 43% disapprove. PPP has polled on 22 governors that are more popular and 13 that are less popular this year, so Branstad is below average in how his constituents see him. But those constituents have little desire to see his predecessor back in office either. In a hypothetical do-over, Iowans would re-up Branstad by a similar margin as last fall. 51% prefer Branstad, and 40% Democrat Chet Culver. Branstad won, 53-43.

The state's voters do not see their longtime Sen. Tom Harkin much better. 44% approve and 41% disapprove of his work in D.C. But in an early look at his potential 2014 re-election bid, two possible GOP foes, Rep's Tom Latham and Steve King, would lose if the election were today. Harkin would beat Latham, 45-42, and King, 49-42. Both congressmen do identically well with their own party's voters, but Harkin still takes 12% of them. The difference is with Democrats and independents. Harkin does ten points better with his party against King than Latham, and Latham does five points better than King with independents, though Harkin still beats both with them.

King has made a bigger name for himself in a shorter time. But it is not a particularly good name. Two-thirds have an opinion on King statewide, versus only 52% of Latham, despite the latter having served for four more terms. But while slightly more (30%) see King favorably than Latham (28%), one and a half times as many see him negatively (36%) as his senior colleague (24%).

Latham and King have identical +15 favorability ratings in their current districts, but Latham could survive redistricting better. His +18 in the new 3rd district, where he moved to challenge Leonard Boswell, bests King's +4 in the new 4th. Boswell is at -6 under both the current and new lines. King's opponent, Christie Vilsack, has a -4 in the new 4th. Bruce Braley is better off, with a +2 in his current district and a +9 in the new 1st. Dave Loebsack suffers a little though, with a +9 versus a +16 in the current makeup.

PPP surveyed 749 Iowa voters from October 7th to 10th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-3.6%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
