Giannoulis leads Kirk

Raleigh, N.C. – Democrats will start out with the advantage in the general election for Illinois' open Senate seat if Alexi Giannoulis is the party nominee, a new survey from Public Policy Polling finds.

Giannoulis leads Republican Mark Kirk 42-34. Kirk holds small leads over the other two major Democrats seeking their party's nomination, 37-36 over David Hoffman and 38-36 over Cheryle Jackson.

These numbers are an improvement for Giannoulis since a PPP survey last spring found him tied with Kirk at 33%. The major difference is that where he was winning 60% of the Democratic vote in April, he's now at 72%. That suggests the primary campaign has been good for ingratiating Giannoulis with voters in his party who may not have been familiar with him a year ago.

None of the candidates have achieved more than 50% name recognition yet. Giannoulis and Kirk are the best known with favorability spreads of 31/19 and 27/22 respectively. Jackson and Hoffman are each known to less than a third of the electorate. Hoffman's favorability is 16/11 and Jackson's is 16/17.

"The primary contest has been a good thing for Alexi Giannoulis," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "The increased visibility it's brought him with Democratic voters has him set up well for the fall campaign."

There's quite a contrast in the popularity of the state's existing Senators. Dick Durbin's approval rating is 47% while Roland Burris' stands at just 14%, the lowest PPP has ever measured for a Senator.

PPP surveyed 1,062 Illinois voters from January 22nd to 25th. The margin of error is +/- 3%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.

Complete results are attached and can be found at www.publicpolicypolling.com.
