GOP leads in Kentucky Senate Race

Raleigh, N.C. – Both Republican candidates lead both Democratic candidates for the US Senate in Kentucky, according to new numbers from Public Policy Polling.

Trey Grayson does slightly better than Rand Paul against their Democratic opponents while Jack Conway does slightly better than Dan Mongiardo against the Republicans, but the results are all pretty similar. Grayson leads Conway 40-33 and Mongiardo 44-35. Paul leads Conway and Mongiardo by identical 42-36 margins.

Kentucky independents are overwhelmingly leaning toward the GOP, giving Grayson and Paul leads ranging from 25 to 34 points over the Democratic contenders. Republicans are also more unified, with their candidates taking anywhere from 69-75% of their party's votes in contrast to the Democrats who snag just 54-61% support from within their party.

A major factor in the early Republican leads has to be the unpopularity of Barack Obama and national Democrats in Kentucky. The President has just a 35% approval rating in the state, and only 28% of voters support his health care plan. Even among Democrats support is under 50%. Just 26% of voters have a favorable opinion of Congressional Democrats.

“It’s a good time to be a Republican right now and that’s reflected in the party’s early lead for the Kentucky Senate race,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “At the same time you have to remember early polling showed Mitch McConnell with a 15 point lead over Bruce Lunsford and he ended up winning by just six points. Things could change a lot between now and November.”

PPP surveyed 1,199 Kentucky voters from December 18th to 21st. The margin of error is +/-2.8%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.

Complete results are attached and can be found at www.publicpolicypolling.com.
