Scott Brown retains popularity, leads Dems by at least nine

Raleigh, N.C. – Scott Brown’s election over Martha Coakley was a harbinger of things to come for Democrats in 2010, but he did not ride into town on the Tea Party Express. There are too few conservatives (27%) and Republicans (15%) in Massachusetts for that to have succeeded, even in a special election. Instead, because more than 45% of Massachusetts voters are Democrats and another 40% independents, Brown won and has remained popular because he has cultivated an image as a moderate, as someone far more mainstream than a typical Republican. So he leads the full gamut of potential Democratic challengers for a full term by at least nine points—Coakley, 49-40; Rep. Mike Capuano, 48-38; Rep. Ed Markey, 47-37; Harvard Law professor Elizabeth Warren, 47-32; entrepreneur Alan Khazei, 50-31; TV host Rachel Maddow, 49-29; activist Bob Massie, 48-25; and Newton Mayor Setti Warren, 48-23.

48% of Bay State voters approve of Brown’s job performance, including 31% of Democrats and 58% of independents. 36% disapprove. Half see Brown’s views as “about right,” something only 27% say about the GOP as a whole. A third of Democrats and 61% of independents see his ideology as acceptable, while only 11% of Democrats and 31% of independents say that about Brown’s party.

It is no surprise, then, that Brown earns 47-50% of the vote against any of the Democrats, both veterans and little-known figures. Almost everyone is familiar with Coakley, but she still loses a rematch by nine points. Brown takes 19-24% of Democrats’ votes and 61-66% of independents—accounting for 33-37% of the overall vote without even factoring his overwhelming 86-94% share of Republicans into the equation.

“Scott Brown’s still doing a good job of getting voters in Massachusetts to see him as not like all the other Republicans,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “It’s a delicate balance but that combined with the Democrats still not having a high profile challenger has him continuing to look like a favorite for reelection.”

PPP surveyed 957 Massachusetts voters from June 2nd to 5th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-3.2%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
