King tops three-way ME-Sen. race, Pingree leads two-ways

Raleigh, N.C. – Olympia Snowe’s decision to retire rather than seek another term in the Senate jolted the political world last week and gave Democrats a huge opportunity to pick up a seat and possibly even retain control of the Senate. In PPP’s first look at the now open seat, Rep. Chellie Pingree looks to be an early favorite, both in the potential Democratic primary and in the general election, should she jump into the race. But popular former independent Gov. Angus King would narrowly lead a three-way contest and potentially complicate Democrats’ plans.

Pingree tops former Gov. John Baldacci and former Secretary of State Matt Dunlap in a three-way primary, 52-28-11. Baldacci leads the six GOP hopefuls tested by an average of about eight points, but Pingree leads the same candidates by an average of about 16 points. That is because Pingree is better liked personally. 47% see her favorably and 41% unfavorably, 21 points better on the margin than Baldacci’s 37-52.

Pingree would still easily win, 49-33-9, over Charlie Summers and independent former Tea Party Republican Andrew Ian Dodge. But King leads 36-31-28 over Pingree and Summers because he pulls 35% of Democrats and 53% of independents but only 25% of Republicans. Against just Summers, Pingree leads 53-37, locking up 85% of Democrats, 51% of independents, and 12% of Republicans, but that slips to only 56%, 25%, and 5% with King in the mix. King is by far the most popular of the 11 candidates tested, with a 62-24 favorability margin, but his challenge will be keeping that Democratic support. If he were to win, 51% of his supporters would want him to caucus with the Democrats and only 25% with the Republicans. That includes a 40-27 margin with his independent supporters and 79-6 with Democrats. He may have to pledge to align himself with Harry Reid and company if he wants to hold onto his slim advantage.

“Angus King and Chellie Pingree look like the early favorites in Maine,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “King will have a hard time holding onto his early Democratic support without a pledge to caucus with the party if he’s elected to the Senate.”

PPP surveyed 1,256 Maine voters, including 550 usual Democratic primary voters and 369 usual Republican primary voters, from March 2nd to 4th. The margin of error is +/- 2.8% for the entire survey, +/-4.2% for the Democratic sample, and +/-5.1% for the Republican sample. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
