Peters leads potential GOP foes by 5-20 points

Raleigh, N.C.- PPP's first look at the Michigan Senate race since Carl Levin's retirement announcement finds Democrat Gary Peters as the early front runner, leading 8 different potential Republican candidates by anywhere from 5 to 20 points.

The strongest potential Republican candidate at this point is former Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land, who announced her candidacy this week. She trails Peters by 5 points at 41/36. Land is the best known person considering the race too, although she still has just 50% name recognition.

Mike Rogers does the next best against Peters, trailing 42/32. After him it's Justin Amash and Dave Camp who each trail by 12 points at 42/30 and 43/31 respectively, Kimberly Small who's 16 points back at 42/26, Roger Kahn and Rob Steele who are each down 18 at 44/26, and Saul Anuzis who has a 20 point deficit at 44/24.

Peters' strength in these early match ups has less to do with him than it does the general Democratic lean of the state in national elections. At this point only 34% of voters know enough about Peters to have formed an opinion of him, with those assessments coming in slightly positive at 18/16. The Republican field is a blur to voters too though- after Land the best known is Rogers with 35% name recognition, followed by Camp at 31%, Amash at 30%, Anuzis at 18%, Small and Steele at 17%, and Kahn at 16%.

Republicans aren't really sure who they would like to be their standard bearer next year, but there is a clear top tier. 21% say they would like Camp to be their candidate, compared to 18% for Rogers, 16% for Amash, and 15% for Land. Anuzis at 7%, Small at 2%, and Steele and Kahn at 1% round out the candidates that we tested.

“Michigan is a Democratic state so with all the candidates pretty much unknown Democrats start out with the lead in the Senate race,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “But at this point the poll numbers almost just represent a generic ballot.”

PPP surveyed 697 Michigan voters from May 30th to June 2nd, including an oversample of 334 Republican primary voters. The margin of error was +/- 3.7% for the overall survey and +/-5.4% for the Republican portion. This poll was not authorized or paid for by any campaign or political organization. PPP's surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
