Perry holds twenty-point leads in NC and WV primaries

Raleigh, N.C. – Republicans were just waiting for someone with a Southern swagger. After Mike Huckabee decided not to run for President in May, Mitt Romney began to do respectably well in the Southern primaries PPP polled in the next few months. But his support was weak. As soon as Perry arrived on the scene, he began dominating the field in these states, more than Huckabee or anyone else ever did. In PPP's latest polls in North Carolina and West Virginia, Perry has at least a third of the vote, with the next challenger, Romney, in the low to mid-teens.

Tar Heel Republicans give Perry 35% of their support, followed by Romney's 12%, Ron Paul's 10%, Herman Cain's 9%, Michele Bachmann's and Newt Gingrich's 8%, Rick Santorum's 4%, and Jon Huntsman's 2%. Perry has doubled his support in the last month, and Bachmann has halved hers. The two tied for the lead at 17% in August, with Romney just behind at 16%, and Paul and Gingrich each at 11%. In West Virginia, Perry tops with 33% to Romney's 14%, Bachmann's and Gingrich's 11%, Paul's 7%, Cain's 6%, Santorum's 4%, and Huntsman's 1%.

Perry dominates by getting over 40% of the vote in each state with the plurality who call themselves "very conservative," with Romney at 8-9% with these far-right voters. Perry also cleans up with the next most populous group, the center-right, with 30-36% of the vote over Romney's 14%. Romney only has a small lead in W.V. with the tiny group of moderates, but trails with them in N.C., behind even Paul.

Perry leads in both states despite still being less known than Romney, Bachmann, and Gingrich. Among those who do know him, though, he has by far the best favorability spread, over 40 points in each state—52-9 in W.V. and 61-17 in N.C. That compares to Bachmann's +25 in W.V. and +14 in N.C., Romney's +7 in N.C. and +6 in W.V., and Gingrich's -1 in N.C. and +5 in W.V.

PPP surveyed 400 usual North Carolina Republican primary voters, with a +/-4.9% margin of error, and 257 usual West Virginia Republican primary voters, with a +/-6.1% margin of error, from September 1st to 4th. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
