North Carolina Republican Field Still Headed for Runoff

Raleigh, N.C. – PPP's monthly look at the North Carolina Senate race finds Thom Tillis continuing to have difficulty breaking away from the pack in a way that would let him avoid a runoff in the Republican Senate primary. Tillis is polling at 20%, followed by Greg Brannon and Heather Grant at 13%, Ted Alexander at 10%, Mark Harris at 8%, and Edward Kryn at 2%. Tillis is only receiving support right now from about 30% of the voters who have made up their minds, which would place him well below the 40% mark needed to win the primary outright.

Tillis has only slightly increased his support from a month ago when he was at 19%. It's interesting to note that Harris, often viewed as the top competitor to Tillis, continues to lag in support compared to Brannon and even Grant and Alexander who aren't viewed as serious candidates. It's taking a long time for this field to really develop.

The general election picture in the Senate race remains the same, with Kay Hagan trailing most of her potential opponents by small margins. 41% of voters approve of Hagan to 50% who disapprove of her, making this the fourth month in a row she's had roughly a -10 net approval rating since attack ads started being run against her. Her approval continues to correlate very closely to Obamacare's approval in the state, which is a 38/51 spread.

Hagan is tied with Edward Kryn at 40% but beyond that trails the Republican field. She's down 2 points to Heather Grant, Mark Harris, and Thom Tillis at 41/39, 42/40, and 42/40 respectively, trails Greg Brannon by 3 at 43/40, and has her largest deficit against Ted Alexander of 7 points at 45/38. The Republican candidates continue to be mostly unknown with name recognition for all of them hovering around 25-27% except for Tillis who 44% of voters are familiar with.

“The North Carolina Senate race has been very stable over the last 4 months,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “Kay Hagan’s in close match ups with most of her Republican opponents, and no one can really break away in the primary field.”

PPP surveyed 708 registered voters from February 6th to 9th, including 305 Republican primary voters. The margin of error for the overall survey is +/- 3.7%, and for the Republicans it's +/- 5.6%. 80% of interviews for the poll were conducted over the phone with 20% interviewed over the internet to reach respondents who don't have landline telephones.
