North Carolinians Pulling for Tar Heels Thursday Night

Raleigh, N.C. – PPP's annual poll on the UNC/Duke basketball game finds the same thing it has all 8 years the poll has been conducted- residents of the state will be pulling for the Tar Heels on Saturday night. 41% of voters say they're pulling for UNC to only 27% who support Duke. Those numbers are exactly identical to what we found last year.

This is a rare issue in North Carolina these days where we find Democrats and Republicans in agreement. Democrats (48/25) are pulling for the Tar Heels by a wider margin, but Republicans (38/28) put their support behind UNC as well.

Thom Tillis continues to be the state's most unpopular politician. Only 29% of voters approve of the job he's doing to 40% who disapprove. One thing that can't have done Tillis any favors was his comments last month about whether restaurant workers should have to wash their hands after using the bathroom. 96% of voters think they should be required to, compared to only 2% who don't think so. It's pretty unusual to find 96% of voters in agreement on just about anything.

“Voters in North Carolina still haven’t warmed up at all to Thom Tillis,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “He’s still dealing with residual unpopularity from last year’s campaign and he hasn’t done anything to help his popularity since he took office either.”

One of the issues being considered in the General Assembly right now is nonpartisan redistricting, and we find that 54% of voters in the state are supportive of that to only 13% who are opposed. There is support for the concept across party lines- independents (62/6), Democrats (59/12), and Republicans (42/19) are all in favor of it. There continues to be majority support in the state for Medicaid Expansion- 54% of voters support it to 31% who are opposed. It has overwhelming support from Democrats (79/11) and a plurality of independents support it as well (47/35).

The General Assembly's approval rating last month was at a higher than normal 23%, but coming back into town seems to have taken care of that. Now just 18% of voters say they approve of the job it's doing to 56% who disapprove.

PPP surveyed 849 registered North Carolina voters from February 24th to 26th. The margin of error for the survey is +/- 3.4. 80% of interviews for the poll were conducted over the phone with 20% interviewed over the internet to reach respondents who don't have landline telephones.
