Wide Playing Field for Democrats in 2014 NC State Senate Races

Raleigh, N.C. – New PPP polls in 8 key North Carolina State Senate districts find that the political landscape has shifted in such a way that Democrats have a lot more opportunities to eat into the Republican majority next year than could have ever been imagined even six months ago.

This is a product of three things:

- 1) The unpopularity of the Republican legislature itself
- 2) The swift decline in Pat McCrory's approval numbers even in districts that he won overwhelmingly last year
- 3) The incumbent Republican state senators in these districts are a combination of unknown and unpopular- none of them have established credibility with their constituents.

Based on our polling we find 2 districts where Democrats have a clear advantage for next year, and another 6 that can be classified as toss ups based on what we're seeing right now.

“Pat McCrory's strength at the top of the ticket helped a lot of Republican legislative candidates over the line,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “But now he's a liability even in places where he was a big asset last year, and that's giving Democrats a lot of places where they can play offense in 2014.”

Here's the run down of the places where Democrats have a clear edge:

-Senate District 9 provides the best pick up opportunity for Democrats at this point. Thom Goolsby is unusually well known for a State Senator and also unusually disliked. As a result he trails a generic Democratic opponent by 12 points:

Favorability of Republicans in Legislature	31/57
McCrory's Approval	34/53
2012 Governor Result in District	McCrory +18
Incumbent Senator Approval	30/52
Result against Generic Democrat	Democrat +12

-Senate District 19 is the other where Democrats have a clear advantage for next year. It's the only Republican held State Senate district that Barack Obama won last year, and it likely would have gone Democratic last fall if the party had had a stronger candidate. Even after 3 years in the Senate Wesley Meredith is mostly undefined, with 42% of voters holding no opinion about him. He trails a generic Democrat by 7 points:

Favorability of Republicans in Legislature	34/50
McCrory's Approval	40/50
2012 Governor Result in District	McCrory +4
Incumbent Senator Approval	27/31
Result against Generic Democrat	Democrat +7

And here's a rundown of the six districts that are looking like toss ups right now:

-Senate District 1 provided the closest race in the state last fall, and Bill Cook's position has been further weakened after pulling out a narrow victory. Although a plurality of voters don't have an opinion about him, more than 60% of those who do have one disapprove of his performance. Add to that Pat McCrory being even more unpopular in this district than he is statewide, and Cook trails a generic Democrat by a point:

Favorability of Republicans in Legislature	35/48
McCrory's Approval	32/50
2012 Governor Result in District	McCrory +12
Incumbent Senator Approval	22/37
Result against Generic Democrat	Democrat +1

-SD 12 doesn't seem like the kind of place where Democrats should be able to compete. Pat McCrory won the district by 24 points last year and Mitt Romney took it by 19. But McCrory's approval is under water now, and Ronald Rabin is both unknown (50% of voters have no opinion about him) and unpopular (among those who do have one his approval spread in 20/30). A match up with a generic Democrat comes out tied.

Favorability of Republicans in Legislature	40/47
McCrory's Approval	42/46
2012 Governor Result in District	McCrory +24
Incumbent Senator Approval	20/30
Result against Generic Democrat	Tie

-SD 15's location in Wake County makes it a place where voters are unusually familiar with what's going on in the legislature, and it's reflected in the favorability numbers for the Republicans in the General Assembly which stand at 33/57. This is also another district where Pat McCrory won overwhelmingly last fall but is now very unpopular. The up shot of it all is Neal Hunt holds only a small lead over a generic Democratic opponent:

Favorability of Republicans in Legislature	33/57
McCrory's Approval	40/53
2012 Governor Result in District	McCrory +19
Incumbent Senator Approval	24/35
Result against Generic Democrat	Hunt +3

-SD 17, Tamara Barringer's district, provides a clear example of how newer GOP legislators who aren't that well known are becoming defined by the unpopularity of the legislature in general. 65% of voters in her district have no opinion about her, and she fares very poorly with the few who do (10% approve, 25% disapprove). She hasn't done much to define herself and the fact that she trails a generic Democrat by 4 points suggests she's instead being defined by the 34/54 favorability rating of the Republicans in the legislature:

Favorability of Republicans in Legislature	34/54
McCrory's Approval	38/51
2012 Governor Result in District	McCrory +19
Incumbent Senator Approval	10/25
Result against Generic Democrat	D+4

-SD 18 is another Wake County based district where the incumbent is largely undefined (54% of voters have no opinion about Chad Barefoot), the Republicans in the legislature are extra unpopular (33/54 favorability), and the generic ballot is essentially a toss up with the Democrat leading by a point:

Favorability of Republicans in Legislature	33/54
McCrory's Approval	40/52
2012 Governor Result in District	McCrory +14
Incumbent Senator Approval	15/31
Result against Generic Democrat	D+1

-SD 50 provides an opportunity in that McCrory (31/55 approval), the Republicans in the legislature (36/52 favorability), and the incumbent Senator Jim Davis (27/40 approval) are all very unpopular. Despite all that though, Davis still leads a generic Democratic opponent by a point. That's a reminder that even in areas where voters are really unhappy with the Republicans it's still going to require strong Democratic candidates to take them out:

Favorability of Republicans in Legislature	36/52
McCrory's Approval	31/55
2012 Governor Result in District	McCrory +22
Incumbent Senator Approval	27/40
Result against Generic Democrat	Davis +1
