Obama still in good shape in New Jersey

Raleigh, N.C. – New Jersey has been a bit of a tease for Republicans at the presidential level. In the wake of 9/11, George W. Bush’s campaign played there at the last minute in 2004, only to lose by six points on Election Day. The GOP may have sensed renewed hope with the election of Chris Christie, but his popularity has sunk, and if he were to run, he would do worse in his home state against President Obama than would national frontrunner Mitt Romney. In fact, none of the contenders would come closer than John McCain did to winning the state except Romney, and Romney only barely.

Romney’s 14-point deficit, 53-39, is only a hair less than McCain’s 15-point loss. Christie falls behind, 56-39; Michele Bachmann, 55-35; Tim Pawlenty, 54-32; Herman Cain, 55-29; and Sarah Palin, 59-33. Romney (52-37), Palin (59-29), and Christie (55-38) trailed by similar margins when PPP last took a look at the race in early January. The President wins the independent vote against everyone but Romney (trailing only 44-45), and wins considerably more support from the opposite party than the Republicans do.

Obama’s approval rating in the Garden State has essentially not changed in the last seven months, now at 52%, with 43% disapproving (51-43 then), still his seventh or eighth best showing in the country. That is basically the reverse of Christie’s 43-53 spread, which is itself an improvement on all his other partymates, with Romney at a 36-47 favorability margin, Cain a 20-33, Bachmann a 32-50, Pawlenty a 20-44, and Palin a 31-65.

“Barack Obama’s struggling in the polls right now,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “But he’s not struggling so much that he needs to worry about losing New Jersey.”

PPP will release Republican Presidential primary numbers for New Jersey in the next few days.

PPP surveyed 480 New Jersey voters from July 15th to 18th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-4.5%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
