Amodei appears to be headed for comfortable victory in NV-2

Raleigh, N.C. – Republican Mark Amodei appears to be headed for an easy victory in Tuesday's special election to replace Dean Heller as the Representative from Nevada's 2nd Congressional District. He's polling at 50% to 37% for Democrat Kate Marshall with 2 third party candidates combining for 8% and 5% of voters still undecided.

When PPP polled this race three weeks ago it was considerably more competitive with Amodei ahead only 43-42. Marshall had 2 things going for her then that are no longer the case. The first was that Democrats were more enthused about her, giving her 86% of their votes, than Republicans were about Amodei who had only 77% of the GOP vote locked down. That has now flipped with 83% of Republicans planning to vote for Amodei while only 74% of Democrats say they'll vote for Marshall.

The second big thing that has changed is who's planning to come out and vote on Tuesday. On the first poll 48% of those surveyed reported having voted for Barack Obama in 2008, almost identical to the 49% of the vote he received in the district. Now only 43% of those planning to vote in the election self report having voted for Obama, an indication that an enthusiasm gap has developed and Republicans are more likely to turn out than Democrats. That's something that's already been seen in the early voting numbers for the race.

Marshall has not proven to be a strong candidate. 37% of voters have a favorable opinion of her to 50% with a negative one. But she's also losing because of things out of her control. Barack Obama's approval rating in the district is only 33% with 59% of voters unhappy with the job he's doing. It would be very difficult for Democrats to win any open seat race where the President's that unpopular.

“It looks like Democrats will go 0 for 2 in Tuesday’s special elections,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “The Nevada race has shifted sharply away from the party over the last month.”

PPP surveyed 629 likely voters from September 9th to 11th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-3.9%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
