Heller hanging on over Berkley

Raleigh, N.C. – Dean Heller has retained a razor-thin lead over his Democratic challenger Shelley Berkley in his fight for a full term in the Senate. The appointed senator has 47% to Berkley’s 45% with likely voters in this fall’s election, not much different than the 44-43 edge he had in PPP’s last poll of the state in early June.

Both candidates have consolidated support from their respective parties and cut down on attrition to the opposite party’s candidate. Berkley has an 81-11 advantage with Democrats, up from 73-18, while Heller has an 86-11 lock on the GOP (71-16). Heller has also upped his lead with independents from 45-38 to 50-37.

Berkley has a five-point lead with her gender, but Heller a 12-point one with his, not much different than in the previous poll. But while Berkley has upped her lead from nine to 22 points with the sizeable share of Hispanic voters, and from 34 to 62 with African Americans, Heller balances that out by turning an eight-point advantage with majority whites to a 20-point lead.

The closest Berkley has come to Heller in any PPP poll is a tie last October, but Heller has had a lead of one to three points for the last five months, and his average lead in six polls since April 2011 has been the same two points by which he leads now.

“The Nevada Senate race remains a toss up,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “Shelley Berkley has weathered the storm and kept the race close.”

Brian Sandoval continues to look strong about halfway through his term. 55% approve and 28% disapprove of his job performance, putting him in a four-way tie for the fourth most popular governor on which PPP has polled since the start of 2011. At this point, 53% would vote for him and 35% for a generic Democratic opponent.

Support for same-sex marriage has increased four points in the last year. 47% support it, and 42% oppose it. The spread was 45-44 in August 2011. 80% want gay couples to at least have the equal rights associated with civil unions, up a tick from 77%.

PPP surveyed 831 likely Nevada voters from August 23rd to 26th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-3.4%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
