Obama still leads all comers

Raleigh, N.C. – Public Policy Polling’s monthly look forward to the 2012 race for President continues to find Barack Obama leading all comers.

Obama is up 49-44 on Mike Huckabee, 48-43 on Mitt Romney, 51-43 on Sarah Palin, and 46-38 against Ron Paul.

This is the eighth month in a row Huckabee has come the closest to Obama, although Romney matches him for the first time with a five point deficit. Huckabee does the best job of the Republican candidates at consolidating the party’s base, leading 87-5 with them. His overall favorability is slightly negative with 36% of voters viewing him positively and 37% unfavorably.

Romney has his strongest performance yet because he does the best of the Republicans with independents, holding Obama to a two point lead with them. His overall favorability though is just a 30/39 spread because he’s less popular with Republican voters than Huckabee and Palin are.

For Palin it’s the first time since July her deficit against Obama has been in single digits and the first time since August that the percentage of Americans holding an unfavorable opinion of her has dropped below 50%.

“Barack Obama is now in a slightly weaker position than he was a year ago at this time,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “His leads against Huckabee and Romney are smaller than his margin of victory against John McCain and his approval’s dropped below 50%. It’s not a dire situation but he needs to reverse the current trend.”

PPP conducted a national survey of 1,066 registered voters from November 13th to 15th. The survey’s margin of error is +/-3.0%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.
