Haley Vulnerable in South Carolina

Raleigh, N.C. – Republican Nikki Haley is losing to former Gubernatorial challenger Vincent Sheheen in PPP’s latest poll of South Carolina. Sheheen tops Haley 46-44 with 10% undecided. Sheheen leads despite being somewhat unknown – 55% of voters have neither a favorable or unfavorable opinion of him (24% fav/21% unfav).

Haley has middling job approval ratings for an incumbent - just 42% of voters say they approve of her job performance compared to 49% who disapprove. Democrats (15/78) and Republicans (70/22) break out mostly along Party lines but the Governor suffers from the most from lack of approval among independent voters (28/57). Looking at potential matchups if Haley were to lose a primary or not to run, Sheheen leads Republican Treasurer Curtis Loftis 46-37 and leads Lieutenant Governor Glenn McConnell 44-41.

“Nikki Haley won by an underwhelming margin in 2010 given the strong year for Republicans nationally,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “Since then she’s proven to be an unpopular Governor, and the political climate has gotten better for Democrats. Put those things together and she’s looking very vulnerable for 2014.”

Lindsey Graham appears stronger than one might have thought among Republican primary voters, with a 66/26 approval rating among them and a 47/39 rating among all voters. Graham easily turns away several potential Senate primary opponents (Tim Scott comes closest at 54-32). 51% of Republican primary voters say they’d want Graham to be the Senate nominee in 2014 while 40% say they’d want someone more conservative.

With a recent study showing South Carolina ranking last among the 50 states with just 10% of elected offices held by women, 76% say they would support efforts to encourage more female candidates to run for elective office.

PPP surveyed 520 South Carolina voters and an oversample of 506 Republican primary voters from December 7th to 9th. The margin of error for the overall survey is +/-4.3% and +/-4.4% for the Republican primary survey. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization.
