Davis popular but trails Perry by double digits

Raleigh, N.C.— Wendy Davis earned herself a ton of national attention last week when she successfully filibustered a bill in the Texas Senate for 11 hours. In so doing, she doubled her in-state name identification from 34% to 68% since PPP last tested it in January. She is now the best-liked figure the firm tested statewide, and the third-best-known after Rick Perry and Ted Cruz. But her standing in a hypothetical matchup with Perry has slipped in the last five months, mainly due to Perry's own improvement.

39% have a favorable opinion of Davis and only 29% an unfavorable one. That is better than Perry's 45-50 approval-disapproval margin or the 32-26 favorability of the other possible GOP gubernatorial candidate, Attorney General Greg Abbott. Voters narrowly approve of her use of the filibuster, with 45% supporting and 40% opposing it. They also dislike SB5, with 20% supporting and 28% opposing it.

But Perry's standing with the plurality Republican voters has improved a net 23 points since the last poll, bringing his overall approvals up a net eight points from 41-54. Because of this, Davis actually fared better pre-filibuster at a 47-41 deficit. She now trails by more than twice as many points (53-39).

Perry has simultaneously patched some of his vulnerability to a primary challenge from the cash-flush Abbott. In January, Republican primary voters preferred a generic "someone else" to their incumbent by a 47-41 margin, and Perry led Abbott by only three points (41-38). Perry now tops the generic opponent by five (44-39), an 11-point reversal, and Abbott by 12 (46-34), a jump of nine points.

Abbott is still a stronger nominee in the general election except against Davis, who he beats by only eight points (48-40). Otherwise, Abbott outpaces Perry against the field by two to seven points on the margin.

"Wendy Davis made a strong first impression on Texas voters last week," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. "But the chances that the state turns blue in 2014 still look pretty slim."

PPP surveyed 500 Texas voters from June 28th to July 1st, 2013. The margin of error for the survey is +/- 4.4%. This poll was not authorized or paid for by any campaign or political organization. PPP's surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
