Cruz closing in on Dewhurst

Raleigh, N.C. – Every time PPP polls Texas the Republican Senate primary gets closer and closer. What was a 29 point lead for David Dewhurst in September has now been cut all the way down to 12 points. Dewhurst is at 38% to 26% for Ted Cruz, 8% for Tom Leppert, and 7% for Craig James.

Cruz's support has increased from 12% to 18% to 26% over our last three polls. Meanwhile Dewhurst has remained stagnant in the 36-41% range. Cruz's name recognition has increased from 29% to 48% with Republican primary voters since January and the change has almost all been positive. His favorability's gone from 15/14 to 31/17.

It is the furthest right segment of the Republican electorate where Cruz is gaining momentum. Among Tea Party voters he and Dewhurst are tied at 35%. Dewhurst is winning easily, 41-20, with non-Tea Partiers. There's also a bit of a generational divide with Dewhurst leading by 26 points among seniors but holding only a 6-8 point lead with voters in the younger age groups.

Whoever wins the primary will start out as a pretty strong favorite in the general election. Dewhurst leads by 14-15 points against the main Democratic candidates, 50-35 over Sean Hubbard and 49-35 over Paul Sadler. The Democrats are a little bit closer to Cruz but still each trail him by 10 points- Hubbard is down 43-33 and Sadler is at a 44-34 disadvantage. The only real chance Democrats have at winning this race is if the unpopular James somehow won the nomination. He leads the Democrats by considerably more narrow margins than the rest of the GOP field- it's just 4 points at 40-36 over Sadler and 6 points at 41-35 over Hubbard.

“The excitement in the Texas Senate race will be in the Republican primary,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “Things are tightening up between David Dewhurst and Ted Cruz, but either of them would be a strong favorite in the general election.”

PPP surveyed 591 Texas voters from April 19th to 22nd, as well as 400 Republican primary voters. The margin of error for the overall survey is +/-4.0% and for the GOP survey it's +/-4.9%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization.
