No frontrunner in national GOP primary heat

Raleigh, N.C. – Even as the Republican field for president really starts to take final shape, there truly is no frontrunner, perhaps more than ever before. And several longshot contenders are getting significant traction in this unclear environment, while others decline. Mitt Romney and Sarah Palin share the lead at 16% in PPP's latest national poll of Republican primary voters, with Tim Pawlenty at 13%, Herman Cain at 12%, Newt Gingrich, Ron Paul, and Michele Bachmann at 9% each, and Jon Huntsman at 4%. While her potential candidacy has received renewed speculation in the last week, if Palin does not make a bid, it would boost Romney to 20%, Gingrich and Bachmann to 13%, and Paul to 11%, with the other three running in place.

Just two weeks ago, with Mike Huckabee and Donald Trump still potentially in the race, Huckabee led Romney, 19-18, with Gingrich at 13%, Palin at 12%, Trump and Paul at 8%, Bachmann at 7%, and Pawlenty at 5%. Pawlenty's post-announcement PR tour has given him a huge boost, the first time he has been out of the low to mid-single digits in a PPP national poll. Cain, who, like Huntsman, was included for the first time in this poll, has benefited greatly from his performance in the first debate a few weeks ago. Gingrich, meanwhile, has seen a decline after the disaster that was his first week as an official candidate. Huckabee's absence slightly benefits Palin and Bachmann, and hurts Romney.

Last week, PPP released numbers showing the political dimensions of the Rapture. GOP primary voters are slightly more likely than the overall public to say the Rapture will occur in their lifetimes (18% versus 11%) and that they personally will be taken up to Heaven if it does (72% versus 66%). Those who think they will not or who are not sure if they will be Raptured favor Romney at 23%, with most of the rest in the low double digits, and the results for those who do think they will be Raptured closely mirror the toplines.

PPP surveyed 574 usual Republican primary voters nationwide from May 23rd to 25th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-4.1%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
