Warner prohibitive fave for VA gov.

Raleigh, N.C. – At this point, Lt. Gov. Bill Bolling would be Republicans’ best bet to keep the Virginia governor’s mansion, but first he has to get through the primary, and Attorney General Ken Cuccinelli is the favorite there. Regardless, no Republican has a shot against the enormously popular former governor and current Sen. Mark Warner if he chooses to make a bid for his old office.

Bolling leads 2009 primary runner-up Terry McAuliffe 36-34 and former congressman Tom Perriello 35-34, while Cuccinelli trails McAuliffe 41-36 and Perriello 39-36. Warner leads Bolling 53-32 and Cuccinelli 53-33.

Warner has a 2:1 (52-26) approval margin as a senator—not quite as lofty as the marks he posted in his days in Richmond, but he is far better liked and better known than any of the other potential candidates. In fact, all of the others are seen more unfavorably than favorably. Bolling’s 15-16 spread is the next best, followed by Perriello’s 14-16, Cuccinelli’s 30-37, and McAuliffe’s 13-20. 67% to 70% have no opinion of Bolling, Perriello, and McAuliffe, compared to 34% for Cuccinelli and 22% for Warner.

Last week, a new candidate all but declared he would enter the GOP primary next year: infamous White House gatecrasher Tareq Salahi. But voters do not take him seriously. He has only a 2% favorable rating with the general electorate, and 34% unfavorable. That is no better with Republican primary voters (4-42). Thus, he has only 4% support to Cuccinelli’s 51% and Bolling’s 23%. If Salahi were to miraculously capture the Republican nomination, he would be crushed by margins of 24 points versus Perriello, 25 against McAuliffe, and a whopping 39 against Warner.

“It’s way early, but there’s no question Mark Warner would be a daunting challenge for any Republican,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “Democrats’ chances are fifty-fifty otherwise, but they have to be hoping to face Ken Cuccinelli.”

PPP surveyed 680 Virginia voters, including 400 usual Republican primary voters, from April 26th to 29th. The margin of error for the overall survey is +/-3.8%, and +/-4.9% for the primary portion. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
