Walker would lose rematch with Barrett in Wisconsin

Raleigh, N.C. – With a 46-52 job approval rating, Scott Walker comes into office more popular than his predecessor, Jim Doyle, who by late last October was one of the least popular governors in the country. But in the midst of the ongoing battle over public employees' collective bargaining rights in Wisconsin, that same 52% who disapprove of Walker's performance so far would rather elect his 2010 Democratic opponent, Tom Barrett, if they could do last November's contest over again. 47% are comfortable with the office's current occupant. 9% of those who claimed to have voted for Walker would cast a ballot for Barrett, compared to only 4% of Barrett's voters inclined the other way. And with the small share who say they did not vote or cannot remember who they voted for but who may vote in 2012, Barrett wins, 59-22. Walker and his fellow Republicans benefited a lot from a surge in GOP turnout and apathy among the Democratic base last fall, a phenomenon not likely to recur next fall.

With a lot of voters angry over Walker's actions, there has been some talk of a recall. But that action would divide voters evenly. 48% say they would support an early end to Walker's term, and 48% would oppose it.

Similar to Walker's job approval figure, 52% of the state's voters side with the Senate Democrats and 47% with Governor Walker in the dispute over the budget and workers' rights. But as on the recall measure, voters are split at 48% on whether they see the particular 14 senators who left the state favorably or unfavorably.

Voters generally have a favorable impression of unions, with 49% seeing them positively and 41% negatively. 41% also say that public employees should have fewer rights than they do now, but a 44% plurality think they should keep the same amount of rights, and a further 11% think they should have even more rights, meaning a 55% majority think state workers should have at least as many rights as they currently enjoy. An even larger 57% think these workers should have collective bargaining rights, far more than the 37% who do not. Further, a 51% majority sides with these unions in the battle, versus only 47% who back Walker.

“Wisconsin voters are closely divided on the current controversy in the state but they do lean slightly against their Governor,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “It's not as if his numbers are so bad that he'll never be able to recover though.”

PPP surveyed 768 Wisconsin voters from February 24th to 27th. The survey's margin of error is +/-3.5%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.
